The Evolution of the Ford Thunderbird

The Ford Thunderbird's lineage stretches back to 1955, evolving through multiple generations. By the 1980s, the Thunderbird had transitioned from its original personal luxury coupe to a more modern, aerodynamic design reflecting the era's trends. The seventh generation, introduced in 1982, marked a significant shift toward a more aerodynamic, hatchback profile, diverging from the classic two-door coupe image. The 1987 model year marked a pivotal point within this generation, as Ford sought to refine and improve upon the existing platform to counter increasing competition from European luxury coupes and domestic rivals like the Chevrolet Monte Carlo and Pontiac Grand Prix.

Market Competition and Consumer Expectations

During the late 1980s, American automakers faced mounting pressure to produce vehicles that offered a balance of style, technology, and performance. The Ford Thunderbird 87 was positioned as a personal luxury car that could appeal to buyers seeking a blend of comfort and sporty appeal without the hefty price tag of European imports. Its competitors included Buick Riviera, Chrysler LeBaron, Lincoln Mark VII, and Cadillac Eldorado. Ford's challenge was to offer a vehicle that stood out in this crowded segment by providing innovative features, distinctive styling, and reliable performance.

V8-equipped variants achieved quicker times, around 8 seconds, owing to increased horsepower. While not a sports car by any stretch, the Thunderbird offered respectable performance for a personal luxury coupe, with smooth acceleration suitable for daily driving and highway cruising. Handling and Ride Comfort The vehicle's suspension and chassis setup prioritized comfort over aggressive handling, typical of luxury-oriented vehicles of its time. The independent front suspension and multi-link rear provided a comfortable ride, absorbing road imperfections. Steering was light at low speeds, easing city maneuverability, though some drivers noted a lack of sporty feedback. Body roll was modest, and the vehicle maintained stability through corners, though it was not designed for spirited driving.
